

I Derivatives & Structured Products

Lowenstein Sandler's leadership role in the complex derivatives and structured products world provides a competitive advantage to our clients. Our lawyers are among a handful of legal professionals who regularly negotiate on behalf of both dealers and end users, providing us with a comprehensive perspective on the needs of all parties.

We craft creative solutions to issues that might at first seem insurmountable. Our clients include U.S.-based and international investment funds, fund managers, and investment advisors, as well as major financial institutions. Whether we are representing the issuer of an equity-linked or credit-linked note program, or a hedge fund client negotiating an entire suite of trading documents with a prime broker, our derivatives lawyers have the knowledge and experience to handle the legal, credit, and business issues our clients face.

As an industry leader, Lowenstein Sandler is actively involved in key derivatives and trading organizations. Our active footprint and professional relationships enable us to anticipate new regulations and potential issues before they occur and consistently provide forward-looking guidance to our clients.
