Lisa represents clients across a wide range of industries in intellectual property matters and both buy-side and sell-side commercial transactions.

Technology companies rely on Lisa at all stages of the growth cycle, from entity formation through exit. She guides both early- and late-stage technology companies on issues relating to the development, distribution, exploitation, and licensing of intellectual property assets, including software, digital, and SaaS products.

With experience in-house as legal counsel at a Fortune 500 medical technology firm, Lisa is a keen negotiator and strategic adviser with respect to technology-related transactions, including software development, software license, SaaS, and large-scale outsourcing arrangements.

She regularly works on complex merger, acquisition, and venture capital transactions by conducting intellectual property and technology due diligence evaluations and negotiating key intellectual property terms and ancillary documents.

Lisa also advises clients on data security and privacy issues, including data transfers, and protection of personal data and other sensitive information.
